BROTHERLY LOVE

If you want to see a real honest to good fight watch a family spat. This is a statement that we have heard any number of times. Add to this the fact that the third party who tries to interfere in a family battle is usually the loser and you have the right attitude on the subject.

How often have we heard and then how often have we repeated that one that goes something like this "What was it the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina?" And then to be rudely awakened from our dream of sisterly relationship, which we thought existed between these two states by the following appearing in the Columbia South Carolina Record. Too much is too much. But read it.

NORTH CAROLINA SARCASM
The average idea of wit in North Carolina is to "throw off" on some other State. We have a sample from The Jackson County News, relayed to us by The Charlotte News. "North Carolina has never produced a Cole Blaise," it chortles.

But it has produced a Gaston B. Means, who now is known only by a number, we believe, and countless others of more or less off color. Since it appears to be so keen to twit us about one of our United States Senators we do not mind discussing the subject a bit further.

North Carolina is so hard put to it for men who have managed to be known beyond the confines of Buncombe county, for the good they have done, it strenuously tries to libel the fame of Andrew Jackson, who said himself that he was a native of South Carolina, by contending that he was born there.

In view of these facts we would respectfully remind The Jackson County News and other Tarheels that the less they say on the subject relative to the merits or demerits of South Carolina citizens the better they will fare. We have some rather poor specimens of manhood down here, of course, but they generally have moved here from North Carolina.

Social Service Bureau Working Says Mrs. Lee

The Social Service Bureau is still functioning as always and are ready to help the needy people of Richmond. We are only too glad to help the needy in the way of milk, food or clothing. We have been functioning as an independent organization since October and have cared for a number of families.

Those who need help should ask any of the directors of the Bureau or Mrs. R. G. Lee, 31 Idaho avenue.

MRS. R. G. LEE,
President of the Social Service Bureau.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis, 643 Sixteenth street were suddenly called home because of the illness of their little son, Alvan Davis, because the boy was unable to stand the trip. They were visiting at the home of Mr. Davis' mother at Lytton Springs.

HAYWARD TAKES FORWARD STEP AND IS TO HAVE A NEW BUS SERVICE SOON

RICHMOND CONTINUES TO PLAY SECOND FIDDLE AND MUST BE SATISFIED WITH STREET CARS

(EDITORIAL)

Some weeks ago we ran a series of articles and editorials in these columns pointing out that the present street car is inadequate to handle the transportation problem of the East bay section. The poor service given Richmond by the present rail line with the added advantages that would be secured by a bus line were set forth in detail. A comprehensive survey of the street car and bus situation in the east was outlined in a special series of articles.

And now comes the street car company with a virtual admission that they consider their own lines inadequate to handle traffic. They don't attempt to solve this problem by adding more street cars on a line or by building another expensive track and letting the people pay for it, but they ask the railroad Commission for permission to put on BUSES. Not to serve a new territory. But Buses to Hayward to parallel their own rail lines.

AND WHY?
BECAUSE AT THE PRESENT TIME ANOTHER BUS SERVICE IS OPERATING BETWEEN OAKLAND AND HAYWARD AND THEY CAN'T BUY BUSES FAST ENOUGH TO KEEP UP THE SERVICE. SO THE STREET CAR COMPANY IS GOING TO COMPETE AGAINST ITS OWN STREET CARS AND INCIDENTALLY THE OTHER BUS LINE.

But why doesn't Richmond get a bus service which is badly needed here. Why didn't the street car company ask for permission to operate a bus line to take care of the passengers between Oakland and Richmond.

The answer is easy.
NO COMPETITION.
If a bus line were operating between Richmond and Oakland at the present time you can wager your last cent that an attempt would be made to improve the street car service or put on a bus line that would give a better service.

AS CONDITIONS EXIST, WHY SHOULD THE STREET CAR COMPANY WORRY? THE RAILROAD COMMISSION GIVES THEM A LEGALIZED MONOPOLY ON HAULING THE PASSENGERS BETWEEN OAKLAND AND RICHMOND AT A COST OF 21 CENTS EACH. WHY GIVE RICHMOND A BETTER SERVICE. A SERVICE SUCH AS ITS POPULATION AND SITUATION DEMANDS?

The demand must come from within. Unless Richmond demands it we will continue to use the old antiquated equipment that makes one as seasick as a ride out of the golden gate in a tug boat.

We may get some equipment now that is not quite so old. Hayward with its 9,000 population is tired of using some of the street cars that have been serving them and Richmond with its 30,000 population may now be fortunate enough to secure some of these cars.

WHY CONTINUE TO PLAY SECOND FIDDLE. RICHMOND CAN HAVE BETTER TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES IF IT WILL GO AFTER IT. HAYWARD GOT IT BECAUSE ANOTHER BUS LINE STARTED OPERATING IN COMPETITION WITH THE STREET CAR LINES. LET'S GET BUSY.

Chamber Plans to Appoint Secretary In Near Future

Directors of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce at their meeting yesterday discussed the activities of Chamber of Commerce week and also took under consideration the appointment of a new secretary for the organization. Although numerous applications have been filed the board has not as yet given them serious consideration. Consideration of the numerous applications on file is to be made by the board in the near future. Pending the appointment of a secretary, President P. M. Sanford and Mrs. Helen B. Kingsbury, assistant secretary are handling the activities of the Chamber.

Members of the board of directors have pledged themselves to give their time during the year on committee work, regardless of the additional services which may be secured for the Chamber by a paid secretary.

Slogan Prize of Chamber is Increased to Fifty Dollars

Richmond Boosters Sends in Check for Twenty-five Dollars to be Added to Prize

A check for $25.00 has just been received by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce and will be added to the $25 offered as a prize for a slogan to be adopted by the Chamber of Commerce as an appropriate trade mark for the city. The contest will close at 6 o'clock on Friday night and all those who have suggestions to offer should get their answers in at once, leaving or sending them to the office of A. L. Paulsen 825 Macdonald Avenue or to the Chamber of Commerce Tenth street and Nevins Avenue.

The $25 added to the first prize for the slogan was accompanied by the following letter when received by the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Richmond, California.
Gentlemen:

In the Richmond papers February 15th and 16th I read of a slogan prize to be given by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce and judges named for the slogan contest.

Hurrah for the Richmond Chamber of Commerce!
A wonderful idea, I am enclosing a check for $25.00 to be given to the winners of the contest for the Boost Slogan for Richmond.

Let us go to work, all united and make this Slogan contest wide open. Let us make the people interested in what the slogan means for Richmond.

I was working along this line two months ago and mailed out two thousand letters offering $350.00 for the best slogan, the answers to come in not later than April 1st. My intention was to interest every one to write a story about Richmond as long as they pleased, its past, present and future, and suggest their views of what our wonderful city is going to be and the opportunities which should be taken advantage of today.

I intend to compile a book of the stories, and had a capable man complete the facts taken from all enterprises and business men for a complete history of this community. I would distribute these pamphlets to all of our citizens to show visitors the rapid growth of our prosperity, and the wonderful opportunities of Richmond.

My suggestion follows. Let us boost Richmond, and show all possible courtesies to visitors.

(THIS IS RICHMOND)
Very truly yours,
BARBIKAS BROS.

Bessie Ferguson Not Officially Dead Is Ruling

Miss Bessie Ferguson, the nurse that was slain in the swamps at Richmond, is still legally and officially among the living.

Because legal proof is lacking showing that Miss Ferguson is dead, the insurance has not been paid to her mother, Mrs. W. T. Ferguson of Oakland. Mrs. Ferguson can get the $1000 insurance policy by going through the formalities requested by the insurance company, however.

The slayer of Miss Ferguson has not been found. Her body was found in the swamps at Richmond Annex several months ago, scattered and dismembered. Officials are still hopeful of finding the slayer.

ENTIRE COMMUNITY MUST GET BEHIND CHAMBER PROGRAM IF CITY IS TO REACH ITS GOAL

CHAIRMAN OF MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE URGES CITIZENS TO SUPPORT CHAMBER PROGRAM

By E. B. BULL
Chairman of the Membership Committee
Richmond Chamber of Commerce

If Richmond is to grow as it should, it is important at this time that everyone get his shoulder to the wheel and help it up the hill of prosperity. Although much has been said this week about the Chamber of Commerce and its work but few realize its important part in the community life.

Its work is essential for the growth of the city. Some one has said, "Show me the kind of a Chamber of Commerce a city keeps and I will tell you what kind of a city it is."

We have reached a point in the development of this city when we require the undivided support of the community at large to put over the program of development.

It is noticeable that every Chamber of Commerce in the various cities of the state are putting forth an effort to increase their memberships. Competition between cities is going to be keen in the wave of prosperity which is sweeping upon us. Richmond has many advantages to offer.

The entire Eastbay is looking forward to a period of great prosperity. If we wish to enjoy our rightful part of this, we must be able to reach out and take it.

Richmond lying idle while other cities are putting forth a great effort, will spell disaster. We have in Richmond every facility to make home, life ideal. We have the high type of citizenship which is necessary. We have the material here which if properly developed will make us the leaders among the industrial communities of the state.

Each one will do just a little, we will be able to accomplish a great deal. One or two men, or a small group of men cannot put over the Chamber of Commerce program. The board of directors cannot put over the entire program, they must have the assistance of every member of the organization and that should mean every progressive citizen in the city.

New Planes to Be Built for Army

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—A five year aircraft building program, to provide the army with 1000 planes will be proposed in legislation, which the war department will submit to congress next week, it was announced today by Secretary of War Davis.

The program, Secretary Davis said, will be based generally on the recommendations of the Lassiter board but will not be so "extensive."

It will be so sound and comprehensive as to be thoroughly effective, he declared, but not so ambitious as to "preclude in advance" the securing of the necessary appropriations.

With the program completed, the army would have a fleet of 1000 planes of the latest type, ready for instant action in an emergency, according to Davis. The amount necessary to carry it out has not been decided, he said.

The program, the secretary said, will be in addition to the regular aircraft appropriations in the department budget.

Referring to the charges of Colonel Mitchell and others that the country is without an adequate air force, officers of the war department today said that in proportion to the size of the standing army, the United States has the largest service in the world.

W. C. O. F. CLUB MEETS

The W. C. O. F. Sewing club met at the home of Mrs. John Collins, 252 Seventeenth street, yesterday afternoon. The meeting was a combined business and social affair and a happy afternoon was enjoyed.

E. B. BULL

A community is made up of two classes of people, those who are willing to give and do their part, and those who do nothing except criticize that which is being done by the active few.

We are all waiting for something to happen. That is true of every citizen in the community.

By putting forth the united effort of our citizenship we can create that condition so much sooner than by waiting for it to happen of its own accord.

If we could all just get that idea and come forth and begin to talk Richmond and talk Chamber of Commerce and at the same time support the movement by contributing one membership and our moral support, it would not be long before we would have a membership and a Chamber of Commerce that would put Richmond in a position among the progressive cities of California.

Send in your membership today and do your part in the building of our city.

President's Son Proves Himself Good With Gloves

(By Universal Service)

AMHERST, Mass., Feb. 24.—Young John Coolidge, son of the President, is a game fighter and a game loser.

Here is his own account of his three round bout with Matt Silverman in their match of the intercollegiate boxing tournament at Amherst college last night.

"We fought three two minute rounds. The first round was fairly even. The second and third rounds were Silverman's. His right was so fast, I could not get my left up in time to block him.

"I hit him a few good cracks, but otherwise I did not hurt him much."

"Silverman was very hard to hit, because he dodged around with such fine speed. He beat me alright. He beat me up good. He won fairly and I have no kick."

Silverman who comes from Brooklyn and had had some experience as an amateur boxer, praised his adversary.

"Coolidge put up a good fight. He has plenty of courage and carries a punch. At the end of the bout Young Coolidge's mouth was bleeding a little, but otherwise neither of the fighters suffered any damage."

Senate Sends Tax Bill to the President for Signature

Reduction of $387,000,000 Made in Tax Measure Just Passed

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—By a vote of 61 to 10, the Senate tonight passed the $387,000,000 tax reduction bill. The measure now goes to President Coolidge for his signature, having already passed the House.

The President is expected to sign the bill immediately, thus making the reductions provided in it effective on the tax returns due March 15.

Senator Moneely, Democrat, of West Virginia, made a last minute effort to have the bill recommitted to conference with instructions that the three per cent auto tax and all amusement levies be repealed. It failed when a point of order against it was sustained 62-8.

Senator Blaise of South Carolina then moved to refuse to concur in the conference report. Vice-President Dawes ruled the motion out of order. Blaise appealed from the decision, but went down under a storm of "Noes" sustaining the Vice-President.

Those voting against the bill were:

Democrats—Blaise, Trammell, Walsh of Montana and Wheeler. Republicans—Frazier, Howell, La Follette, Norbeck and Nye.

Former-Labor—Shipstead.

Senator Fletcher of Florida who protested against the estate tax announced that he would have voted against the bill had he not been paired on the question. It was also announced that Senator Norris of Nebraska would have voted against it.

Davis Says That Courts Must End Countess Case

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Doubting if he had the legal authority to exclude Vera, Countess Cathcart, from this country, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis has determined to let the whole question of her admissibility be threshed out in the courts.

This became known authoritatively by Universal Service today, following refusal by the Labor Department to grant a rehearing of the Countess' case.

The refusal was conveyed in a telegram to Arthur Garfield Hays, her attorney, who had appealed for a re-opening to raise new questions of law.

Davis' sudden order admitting the Countess to bond was prompted, it is understood, by doubt of the validity of his decision and his desire for a puncture-proof court decision.

By that order, he lifted the Countess out of the detention pen at Ellis Island, virtually removing her from the department's hands and placing her unreservedly in those of the courts. By the department's decision not to rehear the case, he refused to take her back.

Officials admitted today that determination to end the Countess' "martyrdom" was a factor in the bond decision. This "martyrdom" was at the expense of Secretary Davis and the department, who have become the target for a bombardment of protest and criticism from this country and abroad.

The important legal questions left to the courts, it appears, are whether adultery is a "crime involving moral turpitude" within the meaning of the immigration laws, and whether an offense committed in South Africa, where it is not a crime, can be treated as a crime under American law.

AMENDMENT TO DRY LAW CALLS FOR PRISON FOR ALL VIOLATORS

New Amendment Designed to Nail Down Prohibition Lid In Nation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Imprisonment for dry law violators would be mandatory under a proposed amendment of the Volstead act approved by General Lincoln G. Andrews dry field marshal today.

The amendment designed to nail down the prohibition lid would deprive judges of their present authority to impose only fines upon such violators.

Federal judges would retain the right to suspend sentences during good behavior of the person convicted.

The proposed amendment was sent to Attorney General Sargent for his approval. It may be laid before President Coolidge later by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

NEW YORK ALIENS

There are 1,494,000 aliens in New York State according to the 1925 census and of this number 1,125,000 aliens reside in New York city. This is out of a population of less than six millions and shows the tremendous influence which Europe and her citizens bring to bear on the chief city of the nation. It has long been asserted that New York was the least representatively American of all our large cities, and it is often the case that the metropolis and the rest of the country are at odds as regard national and international policies. This is doubtless due to the large European population in New York and the close contact which the city has with Europe because of its large port.

The number of aliens in New York however, is decreasing rather than increasing. In 1925 there were 1,600,000 aliens in New York state and 1,204,000 in New York City. These figures are above those of 1925. In the meantime the population of the state and city have increased during the decade, so that the percentage of aliens to the total population is decidedly smaller than ten years ago. The reason given for this is the stringent immigration laws. A goodly per cent of all the aliens swarming into New York city remained in the foreign quarters of the city. This was especially true of the immigrants from Eastern and Southern Europe. Now that the influx of people from these sections has been cut off the alien population of New York is beginning to decrease.

THE BUCCANEERING GAME

Buccaneering in the southern seas had been going on almost ever since the new world had been discovered. Since the new lands had been discovered and explored by men sailing under the Spanish flag, Spain called "Hands Off" to every ship of other nations that came anywhere near her holdings.

In that way she actually encouraged buccaneering for what a voyager couldn't get by fair means he now demanded by foul. Piracy on the high seas became a vocation and a career. By a seventeenth century treaty signed by France, Holland, England and Spain, buccaneering was expressly condemned. Each country declared herself ready to unite against piracy.

But there was no law at sea. There was excitement, risk, adventure and wealth to be had in the pirate's life. Spain had her "Brethren of the Coast." There were plenty of little islands along the coast that could serve as a rendezvous and headquarters for the bold buccaneers. They grew to be very powerful. Most of the towns did big business with them. The people liked having them come, for it meant trade. Of course there were little towns that sought to withstand them but such towns were promptly sacked. The pirates had great fleets of ships constantly in operation. They were all daring seamen. How they flourished. Merchant ships plying between the old country and the new were in greater danger of losing their cargo by daring theft of these men than by shipwreck or storm. Men from almost every country came over to engage in this fruitful business. The minds of boys were fired by the exploits of the daring pirates. They longed to grow up and wear a dagger and a red sash, too.

Since the buccaneering was confined to no one country, it was no wonder that the coast settlements came to regard them as merely trade. They invited them in—and no questions asked. There were many restrictions placed upon their exports, that it came to be rather profitable to deal with the pirates who bought and sold so freely and who offered no restrictions.

Some of the pirates grew to be very famous in history. For instance the never-to-be-forgotten Captain Kidd. (Tomorrow: The Attempt to Stamp Out Piracy.)

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, university student, learns from Mrs. Parker, her former landlady, that the money which enabled her to attend her father's funeral was given by Stephen Renfro, who has since deserted her for another. Humiliated, Molly has had her hair shorn, and sold it, and now she has agreed to sell blood to a hospital patient for whom an injection has been ordered. Molly, desperate after Renfro's disappearance, was rescued from the river by Gregory Cochran, bachelor lawyer.

The courtesy and ease with which the son of the house was handing her her glass of iced tea was as inbred as the keen blue of his eyes or the effect of massiveness when he moved. A vision of the noisy, crowded, ill-mannered home to which she must soon return obtruded itself of a sudden, and without realizing that she did so she sighed.

"What's that for?" Cochran asked, with a smile. His mother had been called out of the room, and he brought his own glass of tea and set it on a corner of the mantel a half dozen feet from Molly's chair. He left it to grow warm, in fact, while he stood looking down thoughtfully at his guest.

"I was just wondering," she admitted, "how many generations it would require to make a person of quality out of a Shannon."

He laughed. "Whatever put such an idea into your head?"

"Oh, all this," she indicated the room, the house. "You—your mother—"

Cochran shifted his position at the mantel and took up his glass of tea. "Laws! Chapel, that's the name of your home, isn't it? It has a nice ring—peaceful, industrious, thrifty."

Molly laughed. "Yes, it's what the Fourth of July orators call the backbone of the state!"

"You're poking fun at campaign orators, Miss Molly."

"No, but when one reads of things like this late oil scandal—well, I had heard the handsome Senator declaim so eloquently about love of country and all that."

She threw out her hands in an expressive gesture.

Cochran nodded. "Such lapses on the part of public servants do rather take the edge off one's patriotism, don't they?"

"I suppose that's it. You see," she tried to make herself intelligible—"I've always loved my state—loved its hugeness, its virility, its colorful history. When we studied about it in school, I used to picture it to myself like a fair white knight—only the knight was mounted on a bucking broncho instead of a charger, with a lasso over the saddle horn and a bowie knife in lieu of a sword!"

Cochran was smiling. "I'm afraid your fair white knight is in danger of falling among robbers and thieves," he said.

Where he stood, his back was toward the door into the hall, and his breadth of bulk cut off Molly's view also in that direction. In consequence, they both started a little when an indolent, deep drawl—famously indolent—took up and echoed the last words:

"Who's talking about robbers and thieves?"

Cochran glanced over his shoulder—then quickly at Molly, who, after the first movement of surprise, had not looked up. The next instant he turned to greet the newly arrived guests.

His mother was just coming back into the room. At her side was a young and handsomely groomed woman—blond, plump, a trifle explosive, if the small torrent of vivacious chatter which she was aiming at Mrs. Cochran could be taken as characteristic. She was the girl Molly had seen in the box.

A step or so behind them was Stephen Renfro—handsome, lecherously, better tailored even than of old. He advanced into the room with that graceful admixture of languor and naive insolence which he liked best to affect. "Who's talking about robbers and thieves?" he interrupted the blond and explosive young woman to ask again in his most humorously telling drawl.

Before anyone could answer—if there was just an inclination—Mrs. Susan Renfro moved quickly toward Cochran with outstretched hands. "Of course, our first call would be for you and dear Mrs. Cochran," she declared, with a charming glance of deference at the older woman. "Stephen says we're quite mad—coming down here in this heat, but I think there's nowhere one can be so comfortable in hot weather as in one's own home. I'm sure you'll bear me out in that, Mrs. Cochran."

She was fairly launched on a topic which would have done service for the next two hours had not Cochran stepped aside to present Molly, who had remained until that moment to all intents and purposes concealed.

Renfro, who was coming up to speak to Cochran, let his hand drop rather precipitately as Molly's name was mentioned. He recovered almost immediately, though, his usual sang froid, and stood taking in the scene with full appreciation of its dramatic potentialities. His wife stared frankly at Molly's simple gown, said something more or less polite, and—transferred her entire attention to her host. Renfro bowed in turn, but did not, as he had apparently first intended, offer his hand. Mrs. Cochran had gone back to the tea table, where fresh supplies were being brought in. There was just one thing to be done, to do, and he did it as gracefully as possible.

He drew up a chair and seated himself near Molly, leaned toward her—the humorous quirk to the left corner of his mouth very noticeable. "And thus—we meet again!" he murmured in the most approved mock-melodramatic fashion.

Molly studied him for a moment or two in silence before she said, "Yes, it seems as if we were as sudden and—as unheralded—as your departures."

"Bravo!" he laughed, applauding softly. "Not half bad, really. By the way," he looked amusedly from her to Cochran and then inquiring eyebrows—"my little Molly has certainly been making hay in the interim!"

Molly was saved the necessity of a reply by Cochran's joining them. Released from attendance on Mrs. Susan, she drew up a chair and seated herself in it with what would have been in a less punctilious man a sigh of deliverance.

"You haven't told me yet about the robbers and thieves," Renfro reminded him, turning from Molly to let his gaze wander curiously over the room. "Have you been having a burglary?"

Cochran gave him an odd look; there was more than the usual discrepancy between his slow smile and the shrewd blue lightning of his eyes. "No, I was only agreeing with Miss Shannon falling among robbers and thieves."

Renfro leaned forward—almost forgot his habitual nonchalance. "Ah, that's exactly what I wanted to talk to you about," he declared with satisfaction. "It rests with us younger men."

He broke off, frowning, as his wife struck in unexpectedly and a shade too eagerly from the tea table: "Stephen's to go in for politics, you know. I said nothing could be happier than for him and Greg to get together and talk things over."

"Just so," Renfro possessed himself again of the conversational reins. "With our influence and backing"—the way he spoke almost ready of "our backing"—typical—"and your prestige, why—we could run this state pretty much to suit ourselves, eh?"

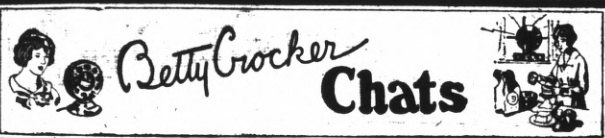

There was a slight pause. He looked expectantly at Cochran, whose face, ever slow to reflect his thoughts, were now his most notable mask. "No doubt we could," he conceded finally.

A clock chimed the hour of six. Molly rose. Six-fifteen was the dinner hour at the dormitory. She felt Renfro's amused, irritated eyes on her—irritated because he had not quite made his point—as she went over to say good-by to Mrs. Cochran. She knew, too, that his wife was appropriating contemptuously every item of her inexpensive, homelike apparel.

Neither circumstance troubled her. During the brief scene, her mind had been busy with comparisons. She had never seen Stephen Renfro for what he actually was until he rashly set himself up beside Gregory Cochran.

The latter had exuded himself, and was accompanying her to the door.

DURING part of my vacation last summer I visited a friend whose mother is a marvelous cook. I think she must have baked for days before we arrived. The first day for dinner she put some plain crisp rolls and some cinnamon rolls on the table. Then the daughter, knowing her mother's bread box, brought out some Kuchen and some fruit rolls. When we finally sat down to the table with all these different kinds of rolls and bread, along with the other good things it reminded me of an old glue club song about a Chinese wedding feast. I find that many people are still partial to their own particular kind of home made rolls and fancy yeast bread.

Butterscotch Rolls
Good home made rolls are always a treat, and the Butterscotch Rolls I am going to tell you about are a very special treat. They are delicious served warm, with the delicious served cold, and equally delicious served cold, when the butterscotch is chewy. Here is the recipe:

1 1/2 cups sifted flour
2 cakes compressed yeast
1 cup milk (scalded and cooled)
1 tsp. salt
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
Method: Crumble yeast into a bowl. Add the milk slowly, and stir to soften the yeast. Add sugar, beaten eggs, salt and flour. Mix thoroughly. Add melted butter and again mix thoroughly. Turn on to a floured board and knead to a smooth dough. Place in a well-greased bowl, cover and let rise until double in bulk (about 2 hours). Knead down and let rise 15 minutes. Roll to one-half inch thickness. Sprinkle with one-half cup brown sugar mixed with 1 tsp. cinnamon. Roll as for jelly roll and cut off one inch pieces. Butter a baking pan generously. Cover the butter with a layer of brown sugar. Place rolls, cut side down, in brown sugar. Let rise about 25 minutes. When done, turn upside down; do not remove pan until the butterscotch mixture is set. The temperature used is 425° F. This amount will make two dozen rolls. Of course, since this is a fancy yeast bread dough, you will find it is softer, and a little harder to handle than the regular bread doughs.

Be Careful of Details
Bread making is one of the most fascinating processes of cookery, and the more we study it, the more interesting it becomes. One noteworthy thing about it is that there are many more accurate in methods. If you have never visited a good bakery, it would be well worth your while to do so. You will see that the machinery automatically regulates the weight of all ingredients, and the exact temperature for every stage of the process, while at home we do not weigh the water or milk, we measure carelessly or guess at the amount. We do not always stir the flour, but dip out another cupful. Many cooks do not take the temperature of the flour or the milk or the room, and the bread gets too hot next to the stove, or is chilled during the night. Then they say, "My bread isn't quite as good as usual today. I can't understand what is the matter." A baker cannot afford to turn out "poor bread" and neither can we, so must learn to be very careful.

In making butterscotch rolls, my first advice is to measure all ingredients carefully. I know that many older women can make lovely bread without bothering to measure anything, but think how long they have been doing it! The young housewives should measure as accurately as possible, and select materials carefully so that the bread will be good every single time. Remember that flour packs down on standing, and so should always be sifted once before measuring. Otherwise you will have too much flour for the recipe.

All fancy yeast breads are made with a lighter richer dough than that used for plain bread. The dough used in these Butterscotch Rolls may be used for coffee buns of different kinds or raised doughnuts, or for other kinds of rolls. You may like to make pin wheels and coils and twists and braids out of one batch of dough. It is that case you may find that you are serving seventeen different kinds of bread at one time, as my friend did.

UNITY CENTER TO MEET

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the Unity Center session will be held in the Richmond clubhouse. These sessions are being held every week and a large number of people are attending.

PROFESSOR NOODLE

NO CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT

Dear Professor:

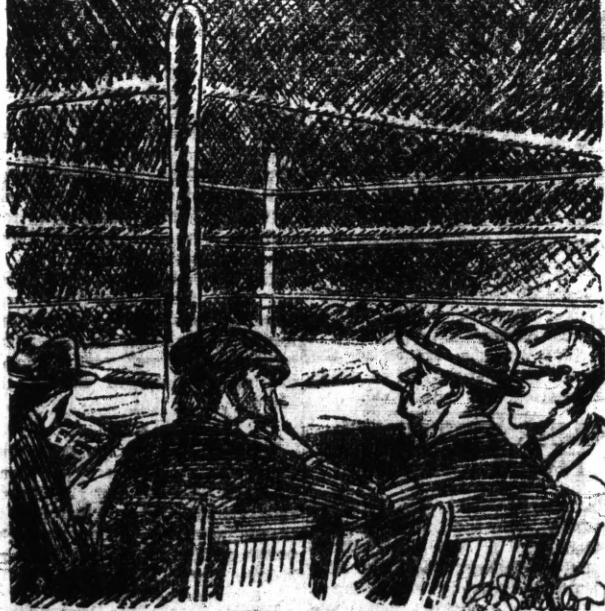

Oh, tell me why my hubby dear won't ever notice how I dress. When I'm in pretty clothes, he never notices their loveliness. I heart broken.

Your case, my dear, is not the worst, and you should feel in fact, content! Some husbands note them on the first—and spend the month in loud lament!

Prof. Noodle

"Aw, no they quarrel in the dressin' room, and now they name of your home, isn't it? It has a nice ring—peaceful, industrious, thrifty."

Molly laughed. "Yes, it's what the Fourth of July orators call the backbone of the state!"

"You're poking fun at campaign orators, Miss Molly."

"No, but when one reads of things like this late oil scandal—well, I had heard the handsome Senator declaim so eloquently about love of country and all that."

She threw out her hands in an expressive gesture.

Cochran nodded. "Such lapses on the part of public servants do rather take the edge off one's patriotism, don't they?"

"I suppose that's it. You see," she tried to make herself intelligible—"I've always loved my state—loved its hugeness, its virility, its colorful history. When we studied about it in school, I used to picture it to myself like a fair white knight—only the knight was mounted on a bucking broncho instead of a charger, with a lasso over the saddle horn and a bowie knife in lieu of a sword!"

Cochran was smiling. "I'm afraid your fair white knight is in danger of falling among robbers and thieves," he said.

Where he stood, his back was toward the door into the hall, and his breadth of bulk cut off Molly's view also in that direction. In consequence, they both started a little when an indolent, deep drawl—famously indolent—took up and echoed the last words:

"Who's talking about robbers and thieves?"

Cochran glanced over his shoulder—then quickly at Molly, who, after the first movement of surprise, had not looked up. The next instant he turned to greet the newly arrived guests.

His mother was just coming back into the room. At her side was a young and handsomely groomed woman—blond, plump, a trifle explosive, if the small torrent of vivacious chatter which she was aiming at Mrs. Cochran could be taken as characteristic. She was the girl Molly had seen in the box.

A step or so behind them was Stephen Renfro—handsome, lecherously, better tailored even than of old. He advanced into the room with that graceful admixture of languor and naive insolence which he liked best to affect. "Who's talking about robbers and thieves?" he interrupted the blond and explosive young woman to ask again in his most humorously telling drawl.

Before anyone could answer—if there was just an inclination—Mrs. Susan Renfro moved quickly toward Cochran with outstretched hands. "Of course, our first call would be for you and dear Mrs. Cochran," she declared, with a charming glance of deference at the older woman. "Stephen says we're quite mad—coming down here in this heat, but I think there's nowhere one can be so comfortable in hot weather as in one's own home. I'm sure you'll bear me out in that, Mrs. Cochran."

She was fairly launched on a topic which would have done service for the next two hours had not Cochran stepped aside to present Molly, who had remained until that moment to all intents and purposes concealed.

Renfro, who was coming up to speak to Cochran, let his hand drop rather precipitately as Molly's name was mentioned. He recovered almost immediately, though, his usual sang froid, and stood taking in the scene with full appreciation of its dramatic potentialities. His wife stared frankly at Molly's simple gown, said something more or less polite, and—transferred her entire attention to her host. Renfro bowed in turn, but did not, as he had apparently first intended, offer his hand. Mrs. Cochran had gone back to the tea table, where fresh supplies were being brought in. There was just one thing to be done, to do, and he did it as gracefully as possible.

He drew up a chair and seated himself near Molly, leaned toward her—the humorous quirk to the left corner of his mouth very noticeable. "And thus—we meet again!" he murmured in the most approved mock-melodramatic fashion.

Molly studied him for a moment or two in silence before she said, "Yes, it seems as if we were as sudden and—as unheralded—as your departures."

"Bravo!" he laughed, applauding softly. "Not half bad, really. By the way," he looked amusedly from her to Cochran and then inquiring eyebrows—"my little Molly has certainly been making hay in the interim!"

Molly was saved the necessity of a reply by Cochran's joining them. Released from attendance on Mrs. Susan, she drew up a chair and seated herself in it with what would have been in a less punctilious man a sigh of deliverance.

"You haven't told me yet about the robbers and thieves," Renfro reminded him, turning from Molly to let his gaze wander curiously over the room. "Have you been having a burglary?"

Cochran gave him an odd look; there was more than the usual discrepancy between his slow smile and the shrewd blue lightning of his eyes. "No, I was only agreeing with Miss Shannon falling among robbers and thieves."

Renfro leaned forward—almost forgot his habitual nonchalance. "Ah, that's exactly what I wanted to talk to you about," he declared with satisfaction. "It rests with us younger men."

He broke off, frowning, as his wife struck in unexpectedly and a shade too eagerly from the tea table: "Stephen's to go in for politics, you know. I said nothing could be happier than for him and Greg to get together and talk things over."

"Just so," Renfro possessed himself again of the conversational reins. "With our influence and backing"—the way he spoke almost ready of "our backing"—typical—"and your prestige, why—we could run this state pretty much to suit ourselves, eh?"

There was a slight pause. He looked expectantly at Cochran, whose face, ever slow to reflect his thoughts, were now his most notable mask. "No doubt we could," he conceded finally.

A clock chimed the hour of six. Molly rose. Six-fifteen was the dinner hour at the dormitory. She felt Renfro's amused, irritated eyes on her—irritated because he had not quite made his point—as she went over to say good-by to Mrs. Cochran. She knew, too, that his wife was appropriating contemptuously every item of her inexpensive, homelike apparel.

Neither circumstance troubled her. During the brief scene, her mind had been busy with comparisons. She had never seen Stephen Renfro for what he actually was until he rashly set himself up beside Gregory Cochran.

The latter had exuded himself, and was accompanying her to the door.

Health Talk Attracts Many To Church Here

An interested audience heard Dr. J. C. Elliott last night in his opening lecture on Prevention of Disease, at the Christian church, Sixth and Bissell streets. Chief causes of disease and a balanced ration will be discussed today at 3:30 and "Why Millions die under Forty," will be the subject tonight at 7:30.

"Prevention of disease is the problem of the hour with the city, the state and the nation. It is the great problem of the scientist and the physician. It should be the great problem with the home and the individual. Disease from improper living is robbing the average individual of at least 15 years of their life work," said the lecturer.

"You may be old at 30 or young at 80. This depends on how you live and what and how much you eat. Millions break at 40 are physical or nervous wrecks at 45 and die under 50, when they should be only in their prime. To the man and woman who gives proper care to the body and brain the best and happiest time of life may be beyond the first half century. Live right and you may live long."

"Scientific breathing is one of the first elements of preservation of health and prevention of disease. We have 500,000 deaths annually in our nation and Canada from lung diseases. According to our best scientists and physicians, practically all lung disease are preventable."

"Many public speakers destroy their throat because they have never learned scientific breathing. Many singers fail to sustain the voice in their high tones because of improper breathing. Scientific breathing should be a part of the education of every child."

World's Greatest Lover

Rudolph Valentino and Vilma Banky in a scene from "The Eagle" now being screened at the California Theatre.

Rudolph Making Hit In Film At the California

Hail Rudolph, the romantic Russian! Valentino's new picture "The Eagle" now showing at the California theatre, brings him to the screen as a Muscovite hero in a vehicle that will take rank with any in which he has previously appeared.

"The Eagle" is a pretentious film with the action taking place in the land of the Czars before the revolution. The screen play is a Hans Kraley, based on "Dubrovsky," a Russian classic by Alexander Pushkin. "The Shakespeare of Russia," Clarence Brown has directed it with skill and humor.

Valentino has a role distinctly different from any of his others and he imports to it a vitality and magnetism that will win even more admirers for this amazingly popular young man. The part calls for unusual versatility inasmuch as he appears in three guises—first as a Cossack lieutenant, then as an adventurous bandit, and, while in masquerade, as a French tutor.

"The Eagle" might be described as a romantic comedy-drama. Certainly it has all of these elements, plus a pictorial beauty that delights the eye.

The star is supported by a brilliant cast, including Vilma Banky as the leading woman, Louise Dresser as the Czarina and many other bright lights of filmdom. Even the minor roles are played by actors of distinction. This is Valentino's first production since he became affiliated with Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart in United Artists Corporation. His initial step is auspicious in every way.

Other features on the same program include "Fire Away," a Mermaid comedy; International News; Larry Canelo at the organ.

Prodigal Son Is Picture Theme to Be Screened Here

Way back in the days when caravans were popular instead of automobiles and caravansaries were the forerunners of road houses, the prodigal son left home to become a self-made man—with the aid of his father's coffers and advice. The former he clutched and the latter he cursed as he mounted his mule and set out for the city under the villainous guidance of a wicked merchant. For then, even as now, there were sirens and scoundrels, gamblers and pawn-brokers to make the road to the city attractive and easy going for the country boy.

With the siren's help he saw the town—so thoroughly that he was soon hotfooting it for home, this time cherishing his father's advice and cussing the coffers. William Collier, Jr., plays the part of Jether, the country boy. Ernest Torrence is the professed protector and Greta Nissen enters as the beckoning city girl.

Whether you are a willing or an unwilling twentieth century wanderer, or even no wanderer at all, you will be sure to be fascinated by this Paramount picture opening at the California Theatre next Monday afternoon. You will be convinced, more than ever that the old song is right—"there's no place like home."

Wallace Beery, Tyrone Power and Kathlyn Williams complete the featured cast of the production, which was written for the screen by J. T. O'Donohoe from the stage spectacle of the same name by Maurice Samuels. Raoul Walsh directed.

"Greed" Proves Film of Merit At the Richmond

"Greed," the long-awaited Erich von Stroheim production of the famous novel, "McTeague" by Frank Norris, opened last night at the Richmond Theatre. It is without doubt the greatest of realistic pictures, and should be seen by everyone who believes in the artistic progress of the screen. The story of the San Francisco dentist brought to his downfall by an avaricious wife is stark naturalism at its best.

In the cast are Gibson Gowland, Zasu Pitts, Jean Hersholt, Chester Conklin, Hughie Mack, Dale Fuller and Frank Hayes. The adaptation was prepared by June Mathis and the director himself. "Greed" is a Metro-Goldwyn picture, presented by Louise B. Mayer.

Fear Expressed for World Court Supporters Who Will Come Up For Re-Election During This Fall

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Old guard leaders today banded together in an effort to "save the scalp" of Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois following the tremendous demonstrations given in Chicago to Senators Borah and Reed.

News of the mighty receptions to Borah and Reed by Chicago audiences for their attacks upon the world court has trickled into Washington in increasing volume, creating fear for the future of McKinley and other world court supporters who come up for re-election this year.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover will deliver a speech in Chicago on March 9, hoping to offset the effects of the Borah and Reed barrage. Other important administration spokesmen will follow him prior to the April primaries.

Senator McKinley today appealed to President Coolidge for administration help for his campaign. He asked for speakers. After his conference with the President, McKinley said:

"The thinking people of Illinois resent the idea that a Republican Senator from Idaho and a Democratic Senator from Missouri should try to tell them how to run their affairs."

It was the first open attempt to drag President Coolidge into the impending congressional elections.

As Borah, Reed and other opponents of the court have announced their intention to campaign the states of several pro-court Senators seeking re-election, the old guard leaders view their efforts with increasing alarm.

Of the thirty-two Senators whose terms expire, twenty-six are republicans, a majority of them in debatable states. The administration is, therefore, threatened with loss of the Senate.

Borah's attitude is assumed by the old guarders to convey the intimation that he may be an independent candidate for President in 1928.

—RAGS WANTED—

Scott to be Sent East to Face a Murder Charge

(By Universal Service)
SACRAMENTO, Feb. 24.—A new chapter in the Scott murder case of Chicago opened this afternoon when Governor Friend W. Richardson announced that he will order extradition of Robert B. Scott, alias Redding, San Quentin prison inmate, to Illinois, where the prisoner must face a jury on the same murder charge of which his brother, Russell Scott, was recently convicted, only to be saved from the gallows by a plea of insanity.

The governor will formerly sign the papers sending Scott to Chicago for trial as soon as the State Board of Prison Directors votes parole of the convict from San Quentin, where he is serving eight years for a San Francisco robbery. The prison board is expected to issue this parole at San Quentin Friday.

Referring to Scott as an "arch criminal," Governor Richardson said today that he now feels no hesitancy in granting the extradition request made by Governor Len Small of Illinois, though he has postponed action for several weeks pending definite assurance that the alleged slayer would be given no loophole to escape punishment if released from the California penitentiary.

This assurance, he said, was forwarded to him today by Governor Small in the form of a report by State's Attorney Crowe of Chicago, who declared that he has evidence and witnesses making Scott's conviction "almost certain" on a murder charge and five robbery indictments.

The murder charge is based on the shooting of Joseph Maurer, Chicago drug clerk, during a robbery alleged to have been committed by Robert Scott, who fled west and his brother, Russell, who was captured and placed on trial.

Upon receipt of Governor Small's communication today, Governor Richardson issued the following statement:

"In the assurance of the Governor of Illinois and the District Attorney of Chicago, that there is an intention to prosecute Scott vigorously not only upon the murder charge, but upon the five charges of robbery with a gun, I have decided that the ends of justice can best be served by granting the requisition.

"In order that Scott may be brought back to California should he be released in Chicago, I have suggested to the members of the prison board that he be paroled in California, so that the Illinois officer can take him back to Chicago. If he should be paroled to go to Chicago, there is some doubt whether he would be a fugitive from justice and could be compelled to return to California.

"I propose to make every effort to see that if justice miscarries in Chicago that Scott will have to complete his sentence here. From the letters of the governor of Illinois and the district attorney of Chicago, I am fully convinced that they intend to use every endeavor to convict this arch criminal.

The H. C. CAPWELL COMPANY SPRING OPENING

Fashions for Spring

Have Fascinating Style Stories to Tell at Capwell's

They whisper the romance of rippling, petal-like skirts and the newly-moulded bodice, of chic capes and irresistible small hats. They tell of all the gay charms that have come about as the result of the plans and crafty schemes that Spring and Fashion have been concocting for many months.

The stage at Capwell's is set for the story to begin. There is no admission charge—come, see and admire.

Small Items of Great Importance

A colored envelope purse or handbag, a square silk kerchief-scarf that matches the purse to knot at the side of your throat, a pair of gloves with color on the cuffs—such small but vital things will bring Springtime into your wardrobe.

Windows Unveiled Thursday Morning at Ten O'Clock

Dresses, Coats and Suits

Vie for the Prize for Charm and Cleverness

It is indeed difficult to award the medal, for designers have given to all three such unique, intriguing new touches that all hold a claim to distinction.

Fashion Highlights

Touches of plaid lend sparkle to jaunty frocks of plain materials.

The most important difference between the shoes for Spring and those shown before is that the new ones are lighter in color.

Housewives are adopting smocks because they are vastly more becoming than the bungalow apron.

Felt hats still lead in favor, in Beret, Reboux, Gigolo and square French crown styles, and all crowns are going higher.

The New Frocks

Are often of taffeta, with pert, flaring skirts, often in two-piece style with trim collar and cuffs. Then again a dark crepe dress wears its color on its sleeves, appliqued or embroidered in vivid splashes—and the sleeves are of extravagant fullness. Pleated godets in skirts and pleated insets in sleeves are popular, while sheer crepes in light gray, soft French blue or bois de rose trimmed with petals of taffeta are irresistible.

The Spring Coats

Here, the cape's the thing, and if it swings not at one's back, it swings from the shoulder as a graceful sleeve—one of the smartest versions. Tweed, too, must have its flare, so the new plaid topcoats, of burly outdoor tweeds flare from the shoulder in sportsmanlike fashion. The straightline coat with unusual fur trimming is also good. Fifth Avenue sponsors silk coats for dress—of satin, crepe, faille, Ottoman or taffeta, plain or quilted.

The Tailored Suit

The arrival of this member of Fashion's troupe is heralded by enthusiastic applause from the young girl who likes its jaunty simplicity, as well as the matron who looks her best in the tailored costume. Made of new tweed weaves, of covert cloth, cashmere or twill, the style variations are more delightful than ever before. There is the plain, severely tailored type, with straight lines, and there is the vivacious flare type, rippling at skirt or coat.

The Fashions for Juniors Were Never More Lovely

So chic and dashing, so typical of youthful loveliness, are the new things for girls that the enthusiasm of mothers even is unrestrained. And the girls themselves—bring them in and let them show their appreciation.

No Pretty Clothes So She Runs Away From Her Family

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Because her father didn't like her and her mother couldn't afford to give her pretty dresses pretty fifteen year old Virginia Simon has fled from her home today.

Her heart hungered for the pretty things she couldn't have; she hungered to be with people her own age, but her mother made her stay in at night; she hungered for someone to love her and not snub her, as her schoolmates had done, so she has gone.

She wrote two letters. Both were written from her heart and were full of pathos. One was to her mother, the other to her father. Her parents have been separated for eight years.

Virginia's letter to her mother said:

"Why should I go to school and be cooped up there all afternoon and then stay in the house all evening?"

"Mother, I always loved you, but it seemed I always did wrong. I won't be here any more to make you angry, and I'm sure you'll get along so much better without me. I love you mother; I am your girl."

"Virginia Simon."

To her father she wrote:
"You never cared for me and my mother cannot give me everything. So I am going. Gee, dad, you always said that you couldn't afford to give me nice clothes. Other girls' fathers take pride in their daughters and dress them nice."

"You know in high school if you aren't dressed as nice as other girls they snub you. I am getting older and I like to have pretty clothes. You never liked me, dad, that's why you didn't give me anything. I hope you have a better time now that you know I won't come there any more."

STILLMANS ARE ENJOYING STAY IN CONTINENT

(By C. F. BERTELLI)
(By Universal Service)

PARIS, Feb. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. H. Pomeroy Davison will sail for home on the Majestic on March 3 after a short stay here with Anne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman.

Anne will take back with her a collection of lovely bagdad prints and Jardin de Printemps gowns which will unquestionably have great vogue for spring and summer. During her visit to Paris Mrs. Davison has spent most of her time with her mother viewing the newest collections of the best fashion makers. They have rarely dined out at the smart night places.

Directly after their daughter's departure, Mr. and Mrs. Stillman will go south for a short visit to the Riviera, probably taking a later trip to Italy.

While Mrs. Davison picked most of her new smart clothes from Lelong and Patou, her mother has shown preference for Yvonne and Callot models, especially the latter.

Both the Stillman and Davison family expect to return to the United States in the near future.

"We do not see that it is of any concern except for members of the family."

Young People at Palm Beach Hard Up for Ready Cash

(By EARL L. SHAUB)
(By Universal Service)

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 24.—The younger women of Palm Beach society sets are going broke because of the hectic season. Money, money, money is their constant problem now, and since they have drained their rich dads and husbands so thoroughly, many of them lack the nerve to ask for more.

As a result there is a great deal of borrowing going on. Male friends, are digging up handsomely, and taking L.O.U.'s by the score. The names signed to some of these slips of paper would give the older generation a shock, and obviously they cannot be printed.

Many of the girls are borrowing from young fellows of no social standing who get the cash from older women for whom they act as escorts, and with whom they dance for a price. One girl, whose daddy is reputed to be worth $50,000,000 approached the writer today and asked if he knew how to raise cash quickly.

"Pawn the sparklers you are wearing," she was told.

"Oh, can I get money of these?" she asked, looking over her diamond studded bracelets and rings.

"Sure," she was informed.

"How much?"

"What did you pay for them?"

She added up, and the total was $50,000. She was told what she could get and where, two hours later she was back without her jewels, and confided happily.

"Now I am out of debt."

"How are you going to redeem them?" she was asked.

"Oh, when I get home I will look very business-like and talk dad out of some stock I can sell."

Many stories come to the constant observer of heart-rending scenes between conservative business men and their extravagant daughters and wives.

Mackay Is Not To Forgive His Daughter Ellen

(By C. F. BERTELLI)
(By Universal Service)

PARIS, Feb. 24.—Clarence Mackay, American millionaire father-in-law of Irving Berlin, is far from relenting to a point of forgiveness for his daughter, Ellen, who married the composer and is now living in Europe.

The reason why the Irving Berlins apparently shunned society, while they were visiting in Paris recently, was revealed today when it became known that Ellen's father has continued in Europe the same "isolation campaign" he initiated in America.

While the Berlins were here several prominent Americans are said to have received cables from Mackay warning them that he "could not continue intimate friendship with them if they insisted on visiting his daughter and her husband."

According to intimates, Mrs. Lillian Havenmeyer, who was hostess to the Berlins a couple of times, was the recipient of such a message. Information from the same source declares that Ellen's father is now more than ever resolved not to forgive his daughter for marrying without his consent.

TENNIS CLUB IS FORMED HERE

More than thirty tennis enthusiasts met at the Chamber of Commerce rooms last night and formed a temporary tennis club. A permanent organization is to be completed at the next meeting of the club to be held on Wednesday night.

Pop Fuller, coach of Miss Helen Willis told the gathering about the advantages of a tennis club and told the club about Helen Willis.

A committee consisting of Frank McKnight, A. Remell, M. J. Hunn, Helen Gately, Marvin Clark and Mary Gately was appointed to draw up by laws for the organization.

A Remell was appointed as temporary secretary and Miss Rita Dreyssing as temporary treasurer.

McKnight opened the meeting introducing Fuller and which the meeting was turned over to Doc Seawright as temporary chairman.

The cost of proving a new way to health

This offers you a new discovery which physicians are prescribing now to millions. It is a gland secretion, derived from beef livers. It stimulates the liver, increases the flow of bile. Modern research proves that cathartics never do that.

This new flow of bile, which starts at once, floods the bowels. It relieves constipation quickly—usually within ten hours.

Then bile is an antiseptic. It combats the germs which breed in the blood. A new supply of bile ends countless results of blood impurity.

Bile is a digestant. This new supply ends bowel indigestion. This liver gland secretion is embodied in a Dioxol tablet. Each tablet represents ten drops.

"Clip this advertisement. Take it to our Special Agent, La Moine Drug Co., and he will give you a liberal sample of Dioxol free."
